There have been a lot of changes going on over the last few months ... This menu will be changing too as I listen to what y'all want or don't want, please be patient.

One big change is the new No-Smoking Law. I realize that a lot of you thought that you were probably doing the right thing (like when y'all voted for W.) ~ But we're stuck with that decision as well. It's no big deal, smoking, no smoking ... you always had choices as to where you could go or where you wanted to work (there were plenty of no-smoking restaurants prior to the law being passed.)

Have any of you actually read the rules that have been written to enforce the new law? Our government has effectively given themselves the right to enter private property (whether open for business or closed) without a search warrant to see if anyone has been smoking a legal substance ... and can do so because of an anonymous tip. The police can't even do that for illegal substances!!! If that doesn't scare you, then there is something terribly wrong with your ability to think and/ or what your definitions of personal property rights/freedoms are. Oh yes .. they have also redefined the word employee.
